

Megersa Abate

RESEARCHER, TRANSPORT ECONOMICS, SWEDISH NATIONAL ROAD AND TRANSPORT
RESEARCH INSTITUTE

Dr. Megersa Abate is a researcher in transport economics at the Swedish National Road and Transport Research Institute in Stockholm. He received his Ph.D. from the Technical University of Denmark. He has particular expertise and interest in transport economics, air transport regulation, applied econometrics and freight demand modelling. Previously, he worked as a researcher at the VU University of Amsterdam and as an air transport expert at the Ethiopian Civil Aviation Authority. His research works have been published in leading transportation economics journals like Journal of Transport Economics and Policy, Transportation Research Part A, and Part E. Some of his main ongoing researches include: economic analysis of EU's external aviation policy; development of Swedish National Freight Transport model; fuel price increases and the trucking industry performance; the costs and benefits of "Open Skies" policy in the East African Community. He lives in Stockholm/Washington DC.