CIVIL REGISTRY

The Civil Registry is the official catalog of persons and their legal status. It records all information concerning the legal status of individuals from birth until death (ex, adoption, marriage, divorce)
The challenges faced by the Civil Registry:

1. Complex judicial procedures and discriminatory laws
2. Unequal and insufficient service coverage
3. Lack of resources
4. Limited by its manual system and processes
The law discriminates against single mothers and children born out of wedlock

Children are labelled either ‘legitimate’ (child was born within a marriage), ‘natural’ (child was born out of wedlock), a discrimination resulting from the actions of their parents.

It is illegal for an unmarried woman to claim their child under the patrimony of the father.

RESULT: The majority of birth declarations are made by the father even though:

According to the Haitian Ministry for the Condition and Rights of Women:

40% of families are headed by single mothers
Salaries are insufficient and operational expenses are not covered by the State.
By law, birth certificates (0-2 yrs) are free of charge; however, officers charge illegal fees in order to cover operational costs.

Entrenched illegal fee system.
The illegal fee system has become entrenched into the culture and practice of the civil registry system. Issuing birth certificates is a profitable business for officers.

Citizens must pay illegal fees to register a newborn
100-250 HTG ($2.50-$6.25 USD)

Civil Registry Officers
Average salary issued by the State:
$340/month
Average salary including illegal fees:
$700 - $1,500/month
PROBLÉMATIQUE: Manual system

Manual processes are inefficient, labor intensive and are susceptible to misuse and fraud

A paper-based system does not permit the interconnection between offices, the sharing of information or the generation of statistics

Racketeers take advantage of these deficiencies to market fraudulent documents

Paper registries are fragile and cannot safely conserve Haiti’s history
Citizens are denied access to their fundamental right to identity

Having a birth certificate is essential to protect a child's identity, family ties and nationality.

Enrollment in school, access to health services and social programs are dependent upon having a birth certificate.

Civil registry is important for the state to effectively plan for basic social services: education, health, justice, and security.
VISION: MODERN CIVIL REGISTRY SYSTEM

1. Legislative reform permitting modernization of institutions and procedures

2. Creation of a unified system covering and integrating all registration acts, from birth to death

3. State capacity building and ensuring the sustainability of modernization

4. State-led communications campaigns
