Useful tips to protect yourself from an disaster

From the JNTO website

Building Safety

In Japan, earthquake resistant structures have widely been deployed for houses and buildings, and most buildings are fairly resistant to earthquakes.

If you are in such a building during an earthquake, do not go outside until it is safe.

Earthquake Early Warnings

When the Japan Meteorological Agency expects a strong vibration to occur immediately after an earthquake, it issues advance warnings as quickly as possible to provide all areas in Japan with information about estimated arrival times and seismic intensities.

The Earthquake Early Warning alarm, along with special sound, is broadcasted on TV, radio, cell phones, and smartphones.

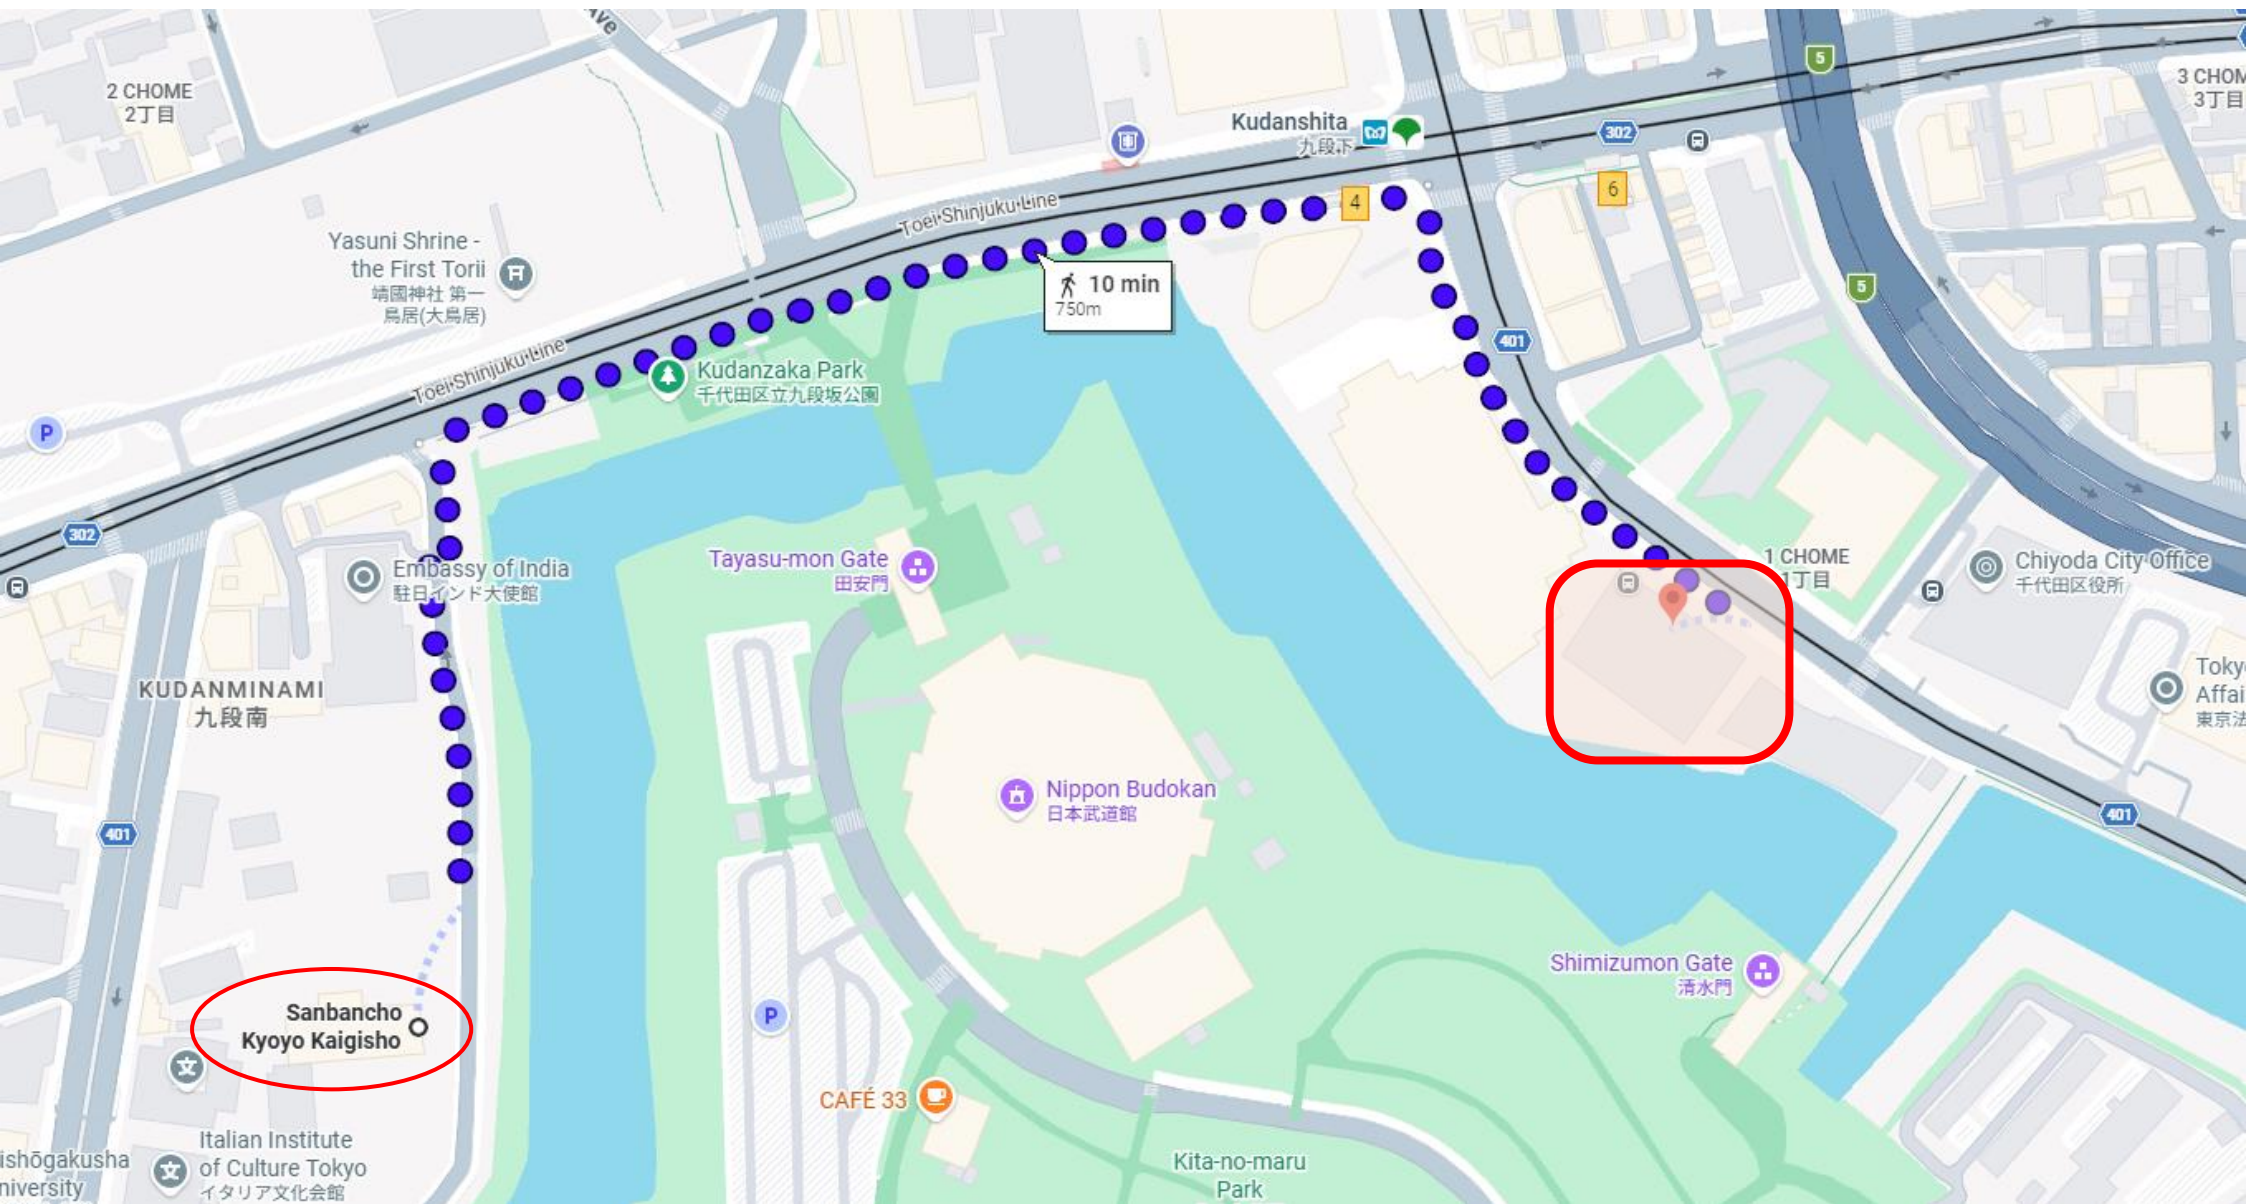

When you see or hear an Earthquake Early Warning, you should remain calm and ensure your safety first depending on the situation, even if you do not feel the vibrations.
