

Ms. Sarah Millard was appointed as the Representative of Australia to the ICAO Council in January 2026.

Ms. Millard is an experienced aviation expert for the Australian Government, specialising in international aviation policy and regulation. Ms. Millard has also led domestic implementation of multiple annexes to the Chicago Convention on International Civil Aviation, including the Carbon Offsetting Scheme for International Aviation, and oversaw the regulatory management of Australia's international aviation services during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Ms. Millard holds degrees in commerce and economics from the Australian National University, specialised in international business and corporate sustainability, and has been a representative to multiple ICAO technical committees to lead Australia's contribution to ICAO in environment, facilitation and economic development.

In her region, Ms. Millard has led Australia's bilateral air services engagement in the Asia Pacific, facilitating connectivity and strengthening partnerships to support aviation capacity building.
