Introduction

- The mission of SAR services is to find people in danger, help them and transport them to a safe place
- The availability of SAR resources should offer a critical initial capacity for responding and providing assistance
- SAR activities are an excellent means to encourage cooperation among States and organisations
- Close coordination between civil and military organisations is essential

Analysis of the current situation (2010)

- ¿is there an adequate national framework for SAR?
- ¿are sufficient resources assigned to the SAR system?
- ¿does provision and training of SAR respond to current requirements?
- ¿are there appropriate communication means?
- ¿are there agreements between parties involved addressed towards complying SAR objectives?
