

ICAO TECHNICAL COOPERATION REVIEW Magazine

NEWS AND FEATURES ON ICAO'S TECHNICAL COOPERATION PROJECTS AND PROGRAMMES

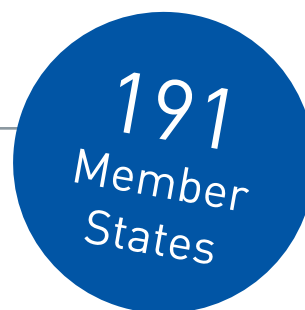

The Technical Cooperation Review is a digital and print magazine that focuses on the important role of technical cooperation between ICAO Member States and the aviation industry.

Self-sufficiency of developing countries in the aviation field is a major objective for ICAO, where the improvement of their aeronautical infrastructure and services as well as environmental protection is expected to bring better human, social and economic conditions. In focusing on the strengthening of civil aviation institutions, ICAO's goal is to enable States to better face the continuously changing aviation environment. This magazine highlights significant technical cooperation projects and covers a wide range of subjects including: civil aviation, communication and navigation, aviation security and meteorology, environmental aspects of airports, airworthiness and flight operations, safety management systems, airport feasibility studies, construction and management, air traffic services, as well as global and regional fellowship training programmes.
