9. Passport or Visa

For entry into Macao, all visitors must hold a passport valid for at least 6 months or other valid travel documents. To check whether you are required to obtain a visa to Macao, the length of stay in Macao as well as the customs formalities, please visit the website of the Macao Public Security Police Force at http://www.fsm.gov.mo/psp/eng/Service_Imm.html

Please take note that residents of certain countries must obtain a visa prior to entry into Macao. Therefore, please go through the immigration requirements in the above link in details. If you need a visa, you may obtain it in the Chinese Embassy or Consulate in your place. Visa for entry into China cannot be used for entry into Macao. Please indicate clearly in the visa application form that your destination is Macao Special Administrative Region or consult the Chinese Embassy or Consulate about how the form should be correctly filled out for the Macao visa.

For those who travel to Macao via Hong Kong, please take note that this travel route requires your entry into Hong Kong for two times: the first time upon your arrival via Hong Kong to Macao, and the second time upon your departure from Macao to Hong Kong. If you are required to obtain a visa to Hong Kong, please obtain a multiple entry visa to assure that you are allowed entry into Hong Kong for both times. The visa requirements for entry into Hong Kong can be viewed at the website of the Immigration Department of the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region at <http://www.immd.gov.hk/en/services/index.html>

Whether you are flying to Macao directly or whether you are arriving via Hong Kong, it is advisable that you obtain the visa prior to your departure from your place and allow adequate time for the visa application.

[Important note] If you require a letter of invitation or acceptance from the host administration to help facilitate your visa application, please inform the host administration at least two weeks before your arrival so that there is enough time to deliver the letter to your place.
