

Alexandra Kaufman

Alexandra Kaufman is communications director for the Civil Aviation Authority, a position she was appointed to in April 2021. Alex is responsible for external and internal communications across the aviation and space regulator. Kaufman has an impressive career in strategic communications focusing on transport and infrastructure; she was head of strategic communications for Heathrow Airport for three years before moving to EDF Energy. At EDF Energy, she held a variety of important roles including taking up executive level responsibility for communications across three nuclear new build programmes including Hinkley Point C and Sizewell C for seven years. Kaufman joined Crossrail in 2019 where she served as communications director.

Alex is a communications leader used to working in issues-rich, complex, highly-political environments. Expertise in public affairs, crisis communications, media relations, stakeholder engagement, internal communications and campaign planning.