

Javier MARTINEZ BOTACIO
Director General, Airports Council International
Latin America and the Caribbean

Mr. Javier Martinez Botacio is an Administrative Industrial Engineer with an MBA from INCAE, Costa Rica. He has management experience in the area of project management, banking, insurance, and airport administration. Between 2003 and 2010, he worked for the Tocumen International Airport in Panama, occupying the position of Strategic Planning Manager.

Since 2010, he is the Director General of Airports Council International Latin America and the Caribbean (ACI-LAC). He is the administrative officer of this organization which represents more than 60 airport operators in the region. His responsibilities are focused on the development of activities to advocate for airports, as well as to develop programs and services that promote excellence in the management of airports.